

Innovative teaching in a new normal

Keziah Gibbs and Hannah Pyman
University of Essex

Session outline

- Background
- Technologies
- What has and hasn't worked
- Feedback
- The future

Background

- Pre-March 2020, all workshops in-person
- Starting to develop online resources

Technologies

- Range of technologies
- Mix of asynchronous and synchronous

Online tutorials

- Springshare's LibWizard
- Stand-alone teaching
- Flipped-classroom
- Gamified teaching

Mixed-media webpages

- Springshare's LibGuide
- Embed other content
- Link to other useful resources
- Support teaching sessions
- Engaging different audiences

YouTube videos

- Formal webinar format
- Varied lengths
- Include demos
- Edited captions included

Virtual workshop sessions

- Allowed continuation of previous offer in a new format
- Flipped classroom
- Live demos and in-person interaction
- Gamified online sessions

What has worked

- Reach a wider range of users
- Accessible from the outset
- Multiple formats for the same content
- Enabled innovation amongst the team and beyond

What hasn't worked so well

- Embedding issues with tutorials
- Some lack of interaction in live sessions
- Some content difficult to update
- Lack of feedback

Feedback

- Remove restrictions on booking numbers
- Live demos helpful, and requested links in chat to allow participants to work along
- Breakout rooms helpful for small group discussion

The future

- Continue with and further develop online offer
- Potential dual-delivery for workshop sessions
- Listen to user feedback

Any questions?

Keziah Gibbs:
k.gibbs@essex.ac.uk

Hannah Pyman:
hpyman@essex.ac.uk